UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA COACHES VIEW EAST, WEST DRILLS IN GREAT FALLS

MISSOULA --

The entire football coaching staff from the University of Montana returned to Missoula Sunday after spending two days in Great Falls watching both the East and West squads working out in preparation for Saturday's annual Shrine Football Game.

Head coach and athletic director Jack Swarthout remained in Great Falls through Tuesday, then returned to Missoula briefly on Wednesday before returning to the Electric City.

Assistants Jack Elway, Wally Brown, Pinky Erickson and Bill Betcher will all return to Great Falls Friday to observe final workouts before Saturday's tilt.

"We were very much pleased with the performances of the men playing in the Shrine Game who will be coming to the University this fall," Swarthout said Wednesday. "We wish all participants in Saturday's game the greatest possible success in their collegiate efforts."

Swarthout has high hopes for his 1967 frosh players, many of whom will see action in Great Falls this weekend.
